Dr Elise Mallart

Dr Elise Mallart is a young infectious diseases specialist with a sub-specialisation in paediatrics. During her residency, she worked at the Necker Hospital in Paris, where she studied pregnancy in women with primary immunodeficiency diseases, as part of her MD thesis. She also has a Masters degree in Microbiology, and studied the interactions between pathogens, their hosts and the environment. Dr Mallart is now a specialist assistant in paediatric hospital Robert Debré in Paris, and is part of the infectiology operating team..
